The great store behind the movie download is convenience. You don't have to get into a car, standing in line or spend several days waiting while your DVDs travel back and forth between your home and a shipping center. But choose a service that does not satisfy your needs can make the process pale compared to other purchase and rental methods. The first thing to keep in mind is the platform that the site requires. Most movie sites requires Internet Explorer and Windows Media Player. Although you can view most Firefox sites, the Movielink site will only operate with Internet Explorer with the ActiveX enabled control. Amazon Unbox requires a proprietary application. For many users, the next Big Deal-Breaker is the selection of the site. Download sites have their films from film studios, who own digital rights to films. A site cannot offer the film without first negotiating an agreement with the study. Some sites, like Movielink, have a greements with lots of important studies, so they have a wide selection of mainstream movies. Others, such as Guba, have a greement with the study. a fee. Vongo is the property of Starz Entertainment, and his selection only reflects what Starz has the right to transmit. When you find a site with a selection of movies you like, the next thing to watch is the quality of the films. There are a couple of measurements to keep in mind. One is resolution, which is measured in pixels. The higher the resolution, the best is the guality of the image. For example, movies in the Wal-Mart video download archive have a resolution of 640 x 480 pixels, which is the same as the lowest standard television resolution. Wal-Mart also offers a resized version for portable multimedia players with a resolution of 320 x 240 pixels. It is also possible to measure the quality in bitrate, often measured in bits per second (kps). The greater the bitrate, the best is the quality bitrate - DVD is about 5 kilobits per second (kps) or 5000 bps. The codec, or the program that encodes and decodes the digital video, can also significantly affect the quality of the video. However, sites are not always specified as codec use. Finally, before buying or renting movies online, you need to read the terms of use of the site carefully and familiarize yourself with your DRM. Some sites are relatively flexible. You can play movies on multiple machines, download them on portable multimedia players and even burn them on DVD. Other sites offer a lot less options - for example, Amazon Unbox received criticisms shortly after the flexibility launch perceived of his terms of use. Several sites allow you to make a backup disk that will only play on your computer originally used to download the file. For sites using streaming media, you never really have a copy of the movie, simply look at it as flow ...Sonce you have found a site that meets your criteria for the platform, selection, quality and conditions Use, some simple questions can help you make your final choice: how much does movies cost? Are they almost expensive as DVDs? If so, would you rather find a cheapest alternative or attach to superior quality DVDs? The rental and purchase options correspond to what you are looking for? If the site offers a subscription program, do you have enough movie interested in making it useful? The films are compatible with any portable device that their files will reproduce on any device compatible with Microsoft PlaysForSure, but others have more limited compatibility. Does the site use a file format you have had good or bad experiences with in the past? Do you meed a download? If it's so, so, Do you mind downloading and learning to use them or would you prefer to use programs with which you have already familiar? The player has all the functionality you want - you can pause, go back and guickly?
